"The song 'New York Minute' expresses my love for my city, New York, and my wife, Susan," Dion shares. "When I first saw Susan, I could not think of anything else. I went to school but didn't hear one word the teacher said. All I could think about was her! Where is she now? What is she doing? I wanna look at her. I wanna talk to her. I wanna get close to her any way I can. My mind was on a loop. Yeah, take a listen to the song. I think my mind was broken. I dropped my subway token, though not a word was spoken when I saw her smile."

The new music follows hot on the heels of Dion's recently released, highly anticipated book, Dion: The Rock 'n' Roll Philosopher. Co-written with recovery and performance coach Adam Jablin, the book offers an intimate glimpse into Dion's remarkable six-decade journey through rock and roll history. With contributions from luminaries like Eric Clapton, Paul Simon, Bishop Robert Barron, and Stevie Van Zandt, the book is an inspiring reflection on his rise to fame, battles with addiction, enduring marriage, and friendships with legends like Hank Williams and Bob Dylan. In addition to the beautiful hardcover, an incredible companion Audiobook is also available exclusively on Audible which includes 30 songs, 3 Rock & Roll Hall induction speeches, interviews between Dion and Adam, and more.

Featuring over 200 vibrant photos, the hardcover book is both a celebration of Dion's life and a chronicle of the evolution of rock and roll. Dion's new single and book follow the success of his latest studio album, Girl Friends, which was released by Joe Bonamassa's Keeping The Blues Alive Records and debuted at #1 on the Billboard Blues Albums chart.
