

Ancillare Enhances Cold Chain Management Services for Clinical Trial Supplies

The global leader in clinical trial supply chain solutions announces the launch of its state-of-the-art Cold Chain Management services.

HORSHAM, PA, UNITED STATES, January 29, 2025 /EINPresswire.com/ --

Ancillare, the global leader in clinical trial supply chain solutions, is pleased to announce the launch of its state-of-the-art Cold Chain Management services, specifically designed to ensure the safe handling and transport of temperature-sensitive supplies and equipment in clinical trials.

Recognizing the critical nature of temperature-sensitive products in clinical research, Ancillare is committed to maintaining precise refrigerated temperatures throughout the entire supply chain.

By offering a fully integrated [Cold Chain Management] approach we ensure that all products remain in optimal condition, while meeting stringent global regulatory requirements.”

Dr. Joanne Santomauro, CEO

This new service offering extends beyond transportation; it includes sourcing of the item, customs clearances, monitoring product expiry, and providing robust inventory management. These features are designed to guarantee the highest standards of quality, integrity and efficiency throughout the supply chain.

“Our enhanced Cold Chain Management services are a testament to Ancillare’s commitment to innovation and excellence in the clinical trial supply chain,” said Dr. Joanne Santomauro, CEO at Ancillare. “By offering a fully integrated approach that covers every aspect of the process - from sourcing to handling, storage, and transportation - we ensure that all products remain in optimal condition, while meeting stringent global regulatory requirements. This enables our Sponsors to avoid delays and disruptions that could negatively impact clinical trials.”
