Kyle Lucks has built a reputation as one of the highest sought after sports artists in the country, known for capturing professional athletes, historical figures, and cultural icons. His mastery extends to equestrian art, where his horse paintings are lauded for their technical accuracy and dynamic expression. His painting, On The Attack (2024), showcases his mastery in portraying the raw energy, precision, and elegance of polo. The acrylic-on-canvas painting, which measures 48 x 38 inches, was originally completed live at the USPA National Polo Center during a charity gala. The piece was auctioned to benefit The Buoniconti Fund to Cure Paralysis, earning widespread acclaim.

“I am thrilled to partner with the USPA Shop at NPC and I am excited for the opportunity to share my work with the polo community,” Lucks said, reflecting on the partnership. “Capturing the intensity and beauty of horses and the sport of polo has become a passion of mine, and I'm honored to see it take on new life through this collaboration.”

“The USPA Shop is honored to collaborate with such an acclaimed artist as Kyle Lucks who focuses on the beauty, passion and athleticism of polo, both the players and their equine partners,” said Brian Kaminer, SVP of Brand and Product Development. “We are excited to showcase his equestrian art at the USPA Shop where we can feature the very best local designers and artists like Kyle that can't be found anywhere but here."

Lucks has also partnered with and provided his art to The Historical Society of Palm Beach County, where both the USPA and U.S. Polo Assn. are featured in the current exhibit "Wish You Were Here," to showcase polo and its importance to Palm Beach County over the years.

The painting On The Attack embodies the spirit of the sport — speed, strategy, and power. The painting's splattered paint and dynamic drips mirror the dirt, grass, and divots of the polo field, bringing the game's energy to life through the print on the tote bag.
