At the core of this campaign is a promise to put an end to the divisive politics that have held New York back for too long. The candidate recognizes that the prevailing one-party rule has hindered prosperity for many communities, leading to policies that benefit only a select few. By advocating for bipartisan solutions and a more inclusive decision-making process, the campaign aims to create a government that represents all New Yorkers, rather than a narrow set of interests.

"I am proud and excited to announce my candidacy for the democratic nomination for Governor," said Leary. "My promise is to represent ALL New Yorkers. Moderation is key - for every left-leaning piece of legislation that I sign into law, I will also sign a right-leaning piece of legislation into law. I will force our lawmakers to work together in a team effort to pass bipartisan legislation that creates a brighter future for everyone."

The candidate's vision includes a commitment to sign only single-issue bills that are concise and focused, enabling lawmakers to work together more effectively. This approach is designed to foster teamwork among legislators from both conservative and progressive backgrounds, ultimately leading to legislation that benefits the entire state. Key priorities include tax reform, education reform, addressing crime, affordability, and ensuring that local communities have greater control over their resources and decisions.

In addressing issues of inequality and social justice, the campaign emphasizes rehabilitation over incarceration for non-violent offenses and aims to decriminalize certain activities. This focus aligns with the candidate's broader goal of creating a fair and just society where all individuals have the opportunity to thrive. By listening to the voices of local communities and prioritizing their feedback, the campaign seeks to develop policies that truly reflect the needs and aspirations of New Yorkers.

The candidate acknowledges that cost of living and affordability is a top concern for all New Yorkers as the campaign vows to disrupt the status quo with common sense solutions to put money back into the pockets of residents. The plan includes abolishing the income tax and various other government fees such as vehicle registration. High tuition costs will be combated by creating more competition with a free-to-attend New York Online University.

The candidate's qualifications include a background in accounting and a strong commitment to education reform, derived from personal experience as a parent and active community member. This expertise will inform the candidate's approach to governance, ensuring that fiscal responsibility and effective resource allocation are at the forefront of their administration. By conducting audits and eliminating wasteful spending, the campaign aims to create a more efficient and accountable government.

Transparency and accountability are central tenets of this campaign. The candidate pledges to engage openly with the media and the public, providing clear answers to policy-related questions. By establishing regular press conferences and encouraging dialogue with reporters, the candidate aims to build trust and ensure that the administration remains accessible to all New Yorkers.

As the campaign unfolds, the candidate emphasizes the importance of collaboration and unity among lawmakers. By fostering an environment where bipartisan efforts are prioritized, the campaign aims to cultivate a culture of cooperation that can lead to meaningful change. Ultimately, the vision for New York in 2026 is one of inclusivity, progress, and a renewed sense of hope for all residents.

Scheduling of press interviews will begin immediately. "All journalists and media outlets who are early adopters of my movement will be rewarded with exclusive scoops after I win the governorship in 2026, while the journalists who attempt to censor our movement, and diminish the voices of the people in an effort to protect establishment politicians, will go in the back of the line for interviews."
