Rural men folk often wear silver earrings and waistbands. Enamel jewellery is known as Meenakari jewellery . Jaipur (<https://www.shopkhoj.com/jaipur>) is known for its multicoloured enamel designs on the reverse of the ornament . Kundan is a form of jewellery where gem stones and cut glass are embedded in gold sheets.

Among the various types of Indian jewellery, kamarbandh, jhoomar, and bajubandh stand out for their beauty and significance. They are unique Indian jewellery pieces that are often not found elsewhere in the world. These pieces not only add a touch of elegance to any outfit but also hold deep cultural and historical significance.

Kamarbandh, (<https://www.shopkhoj.com/jewellery/kamarbandh/>) also known as waistbands, are worn around the waist and are adorned with precious stones, pearls, and intricate designs. Kamar means 'waist' in Hindi and bandh means 'to clasp'. They have been a part of Indian culture for centuries and were initially worn by women as a symbol of their marital status. Today, kamarbandhs are worn by women of all ages and are considered a must-have accessory for weddings and other special occasions. They are also popular among dancers and performers, adding a touch of glamour to their costumes.

Kamarbandh

Jhoomar -Hair adornment

Jhoomar, (<https://www.shopkhoj.com/jewellery/jhoomar/>) also known as passa, is a unique piece of Indian jewellery that is worn on the side of the head. It is traditionally worn by brides and is believed to bring good luck and prosperity to the marriage. Jhoomars are usually made of gold or silver and are adorned with precious stones and intricate designs. They are a symbol of beauty and grace and are often passed down from generation to generation. All Indian brides opt for to wear the Jhoomar today.

Armlet, Bajubandh

Bajubandh, (<https://www.shopkhoj.com/jewellery/armlet/>) also known as armlet, are worn around the upper arm and are a symbol of strength and beauty.

Similar to kamarbandh, baju means arms and bandh means clasp in Hindi . Hence, bajubandh means that which clasps the arm. They are traditionally worn by women during weddings and other special occasions and are believed to bring good luck and protect the wearer from evil. Bajubandhs are available in a variety of designs and are often adorned with precious stones and intricate patterns, making them a statement piece of Indian jewellery. They can be in gold or silver . They add unusual grace & charm.

The beauty and significance of kamarbandh, jhoomar, and bajubandh make them an integral part of Indian culture and traditions. These unique pieces of jewellery not only add a touch of elegance to any outfit but also hold deep cultural and historical significance. So, the next time you want to add a touch of Indian tradition to your look, don't forget to include these beautiful pieces in your ensemble.
