What's driving the Pegintron market's uptick? The rising prevalence of hepatitis C stands out as a significant growth propellant. Hepatitis C, a viral infection primarily affecting the liver, caused by the hepatitis C virus HCV, results in an increased burden on healthcare systems. This increases the demand for effective diagnostic tools, antiviral treatments, and public health interventions.

So how does Pegintron come into play here? Pegintron, a pegylated interferon alfa-2b, aids in treating hepatitis C by boosting the immune system's ability to fight against the virus. This presents an enhanced efficacy through its prolonged half-life, which allows for less frequent dosing and better patient adherence when used in combination with antiviral medications like ribavirin.
