NEW YORK, NY, UNITED STATES,
January 29, 2025 /EINPresswire.com/ --

A new analysis report on the global high fructose corn syrup \(HFCS\) market, which is forecasted between 2025 and 2030, has been published by Knowledge Sourcing Intelligence. HFCS is one of the most versatile products on the market. It maintains color and quality while enhancing the flavor and taste of various food and beverage products.

It is affordable and readily available. The average price of HFCS is less than that of other sweeteners like glucose. According to an NCG study, HFCS in soft drinks costs half as much as sugar sweeteners. This enables food and beverage firms to improve earnings or invest in product development. Companies compete with one another to produce and enhance the quality of their products, investing large resources in invention, development, and patenting.

The increasing global food and beverage sector has led to increased demand for high fructose corn syrup (HFCS). HFCS is one of the most versatile products on the market.”

Based on type, the high fructose corn syrup (HFCS) market is divided into HFCS 42, HFCS 55, and Others. HFCS 42 accounts for the higher usage of processed foods, cereal, breakfast, and biscuits. HFCS 55 also has a stronger application in beverages, especially in soft drinks on account of sweetness.

By application, the market is segmented into food and beverages, pharmaceuticals, animal feed, and others. HFCS is used as a sweetener primarily in soft drinks, processed foods, baked goods, and confectionery. Other important segments include pharmaceuticals, where HFCS is used to a limited extent as a sweetener and excipient in some formulations, and animal feed, used as a sweetener and source of energy. Others comprise several niche applications, including industrial processes and chemical products.

Based on the distribution channel the high fructose corn syrup (HFCS) market is bifurcated into online and offline. Offline channels are supermarkets, grocery stores, convenience stores, and other physical retail outlets. Online channels include e-commerce platforms, online marketplaces, and direct-to-consumer sales through manufacturers' websites, which are increasingly important for their convenience and accessibility to a broader customer base.

Geographically, the Asia Pacific region is expected to see notable growth, propelled by expansion in the food and beverage sector. According to the India Brand Equity Foundation (IBEF), India is the most populous country in the world. The growing consumption of food is projected to reach USD 1.2 trillion by 2025-26, driven by urbanization and changing consumption patterns. The market size of the food processing sector in India is estimated to reach USD 1,274 billion by 2027. China is also witnessing strong growth in its food processing industry, with the value of food production growing by 2.9 percent in 2023. The demand for food ingredients in China will remain strong due to the processing industry.

As a part of the report, the major players operating in the global high fructose corn syrup (HFCS) market that have been covered are Cargill, Incorporated, Roquette, and Sanofi Ingredient among others.
