The global zinc stearate market is segmented by function into four major categories: Release agent, emulsifiers, thickening agent, and others. Zinc stearates have the excellent release property that prevents sticking and fouling when used in making plastics and rubbers. Additionally, zinc stearates can be used as emulsifier in cosmetics and toiletries. They melt relatively fast compared to other stearates because their melting point is sharp. Zinc stearates are also hydrophobic, nonstick, and lipophilic. They do not dissolve in solvents such as ethers and alcohols that are polar; however, it dissolves with aromatic compounds as well as other nonpolar polyolefin media.

The global zinc stearate market by application category is segmented into rubber, plastics, concrete, cosmetics & personal care, others. The global zinc stearate industry is expected to soar with a significant growth rate during the forecast period owing to the proliferating beauty industry. Increasing interest in cosmetics among many women globally is one of the main factors driving the adoption of cosmetic products on a large scale. This is mainly attributed to the fact that these women love to explore a range of beauty products in the market. This has led to the high market demand for cosmetics, which is further poised to propel the market growth in the forecast period. Additionally, the advent of many independent brands with novel ideas in the field of cosmetics to remain beautiful or become beautiful is adding to industrial growth. The burgeoning craze of cosmetics is not only being realized among the younger generation but also experienced among older adults.

Based on geography, the Asia Pacific region is likely to increase significantly as Asia Pacific is an emerging market with strong growth potential mainly because of rapid industrialization and urbanization. China and India are prominent consumers of zinc stearate, influenced by the continued growth in their manufacturing industries, especially in plastics, rubber, and cosmetics. South Korea ranks among the top ten beauty markets worldwide, recognized for its innovative products, natural ingredients, and attractive packaging. According to Korea Customs Service estimates for 2022, skincare cosmetics remained the most popular import category, accounting for 41.8%, or $711 million, of total cosmetic imports.
