Aneurysm clips are essential surgical tools used to treat brain aneurysms, a life-threatening condition where blood vessels in the brain weaken and bulge. These clips are applied during surgery to close off an aneurysm, preventing it from rupturing and causing severe damage, such as stroke or even death.

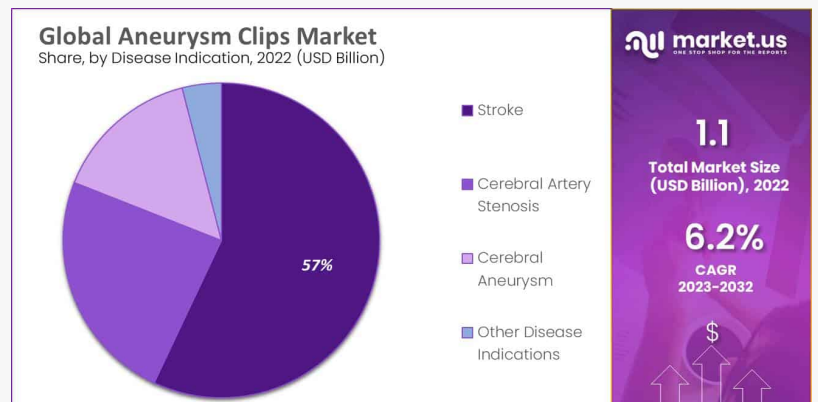

The clip is typically made of non-corrosive, biocompatible materials such as titanium or stainless steel, ensuring both strength and safety for long-term use inside the body.

Aneurysm clipping is a delicate procedure performed by neurosurgeons, and the clip remains in place permanently to secure the aneurysm and restore normal blood flow to the affected area. Modern aneurysm clips are designed to be highly effective, offering precision, minimal invasiveness, and ease of application.

As advancements in surgical technology continue, aneurysm clips are becoming increasingly refined, with improvements in their size, design, and adaptability to various types of aneurysms,

Key Takeaways

- 1. Neurosurgery Applications: Aneurysm clips are widely used in neurosurgery to treat intracranial aneurysms, which occur when the walls of blood vessels in the brain weaken and risk rupturing, potentially leading to life-threatening situations.
- 2. Aneurysm Isolation: Aneurysm clips effectively isolate the aneurysm by sealing off its neck from the main blood vessel, significantly reducing the risk of rupture and the associated danger of hemorrhage.
- 3. Materials Used in Aneurysm Clips: Typically made from biocompatible materials such as titanium, aneurysm clips ensure maximum safety and long-term stability within the body, minimizing the risk of complications.
- 4. Clip Designs: Aneurysm clips come in various designs, including straight, fenestrated, and curved options. The selection depends on factors like the aneurysm's size, location, and shape, allowing for precise and effective treatment.
- 5. Surgical Techniques: In the surgical procedure known as "clipping," neurosurgeons perform open surgery to locate the aneurysm and apply the appropriate clips around it to secure and prevent rupture.
