FMI highlights increasing demand for hand tools in commercial sectors, particularly for repair and maintenance work, as a key factor boosting sales of hammers, cutters, saws, and other tools. Expanding sales networks and enticing new players in the reselling sector are also contributing to market growth. Manufacturers are offering franchise opportunities with low initial investment and comprehensive support, including marketing, training, and operational guidance.

Among product types, wrenches are expected to see the highest demand, with multipurpose wrenches such as adjustable, torque, and pipe wrenches being popular choices among professional builders and craftsmen in the construction industry.
