Taj Sulaiman, Director of Communications and Private Sector Partnerships at Education Above All Foundation said: "This collaboration with Amrapali Jewels is a testament to the impact we can create when we come together to support children in need. By blending heritage and artistry, this collection helps raise vital funds to provide education for marginalised children, giving them hope and opportunities for a better future."

Amrapali Jewels CEO, Tarang Arora, added: "Amrapali Jewels is excited and honoured to collaborate with Education Above All Foundation. Education is close to our hearts, and it is why many of the unique pieces belonging to our founders, my father Rajiv Arora and Rajesh Ajmera, are displayed in our museum in Jaipur—to continue educating people about the art of jewellery making. This collaboration with Education Above All is an exciting progression in our belief that education uplifts and empowers, using traditional Indian craftsmanship and heritage inspired by the unique cultural influences of Qatar. Each piece has been meticulously designed specifically for the 'Bejewelled Horizons' Collection, with part of the proceeds dedicated to supporting EAA."
