Opening Keynote

leaders of the CEA Alliance will share their views on the state of the industry, focusing on today's challenges and tomorrow's opportunities. Growers will address the outlook for indoor vertical farming and high-tech greenhouse production, including production of leafy greens, tomatoes, berries and more.

Moderated by CEA Alliance Executive Director Tom Stenzel, the keynote panel includes leaders across the CEA landscape: Tisha Livingston, President, 80 Acres and CEO, Infinite Acres, Skip Hulett, Vice President and General Counsel, NatureSweet and Abby Prior, Chief Commercial Officer, BrightFarms.

"The Opening Keynote is one of the highlights of Indoor Ag-Con, and sets the stage for the 2-day conference, which is jam packed with inspiring and thought-provoking sessions," said Brian Sullivan, CEO, Indoor Ag-Con. "We are honored to have three industry leaders whose expertise will provide attendees with actionable insights and a roadmap for success in this rapidly evolving industry."

"I'm excited to moderate the State of the Industry keynote at Indoor Ag-Con as it's not just about guiding a conversation, it's about challenging perspectives, uncovering solutions, and pushing the boundaries of what's next in controlled environment agriculture," added Tom Stenzel, Executive Director, CEA Alliance. "This industry moves fast, but the real impact comes when visionaries, growers, and leaders come together to shape the future of food."

Look for more information on the day two keynote coming soon. In addition to keynote general sessions, attendees will have the opportunity to choose from a full roster of educational programming, explore the largest expo floor in the show's 12-year history and network at daily luncheons, breakouts, an opening day cocktail reception, and more.
