Attack surface management

technology provider Cavelo Inc. today announced its selection as a 2025 CIX Startup Award recipient in the Early category.

The CIX Startup Awards, Canada's premier national showcase of innovative tech companies, are

This recognition underscores our team's dedication to developing disruptive technology that drives meaningful change for our customers and their cybersecurity challenges.”

James Mignacca, CEO at Cavelo

selected by a committee of over 100 top global investors and experts of innovation. The program amplifies Canada's most promising startups at both early and growth stages to a global audience of active investors.

“Being selected as a CIX Startup Award winner marks a significant milestone for Cavelo,” said James Mignacca, CEO of Cavelo. “This recognition underscores our team's dedication to developing disruptive technology that drives meaningful change for our customers and their cybersecurity challenges. We’re truly honoured to receive this prestigious award and remain committed to pushing Canadian innovation forward on a global scale.”

Since the company's launch in 2021, Cavelo has established a respected brand in the North American cybersecurity market. In 2024, Cavelo was recognized as a market ‘Challenger’ and ‘Outperformer’ in the third annual GigaOm Attack Surface Management Radar Report¹, which evaluates innovative technologies in the emerging Attack Surface Management space. Cavelo's two-time founders have fundraised CAD$8M to-date, from leading investors including Inovia Capital, Graphite Ventures, MaRS Investment Accelerator and with participation from strategic angels.

The 2025 CIX Summit, powered by Elevate, will take place on March 26, 2025, at the Design

Exchange, 234 Bay Street, Toronto. In its 18th year, the CIX Summit brings together over 250 founders and 200 global investors and advisors to showcase innovative companies and foster new investment deals.

As part of this recognition, Cavelo's CEO, James Mignacca, will present on the Summit Stage on Wednesday, March 26. This presentation will provide an opportunity to showcase Cavelo's innovative solutions to an audience of investors, startups, and corporates.
