This thought-provoking exhibition delves into the complex narrative of human migration by intertwining scientific research with artistic expression. Drawing from the "Out of Africa" theory, the installation challenges viewers to reconsider contemporary perceptions of racial and national boundaries.

“

While scientific evidence unequivocally proves our common DNA, societal divisions persist, driven by perceived differences that ultimately undermine our shared human experience.”

Utilizing a unique blend of photography and video, "The Invisible Borders-Lines" presents a nuanced exploration of humanity's interconnected origins. The artwork strategically manipulates physical appearances to highlight both individual beauty and the racial phenotypes that have emerged through immigration patterns.

"My project confronts a critical contradiction," says the artist. "While scientific evidence unequivocally proves our common DNA, societal divisions persist, driven by perceived differences that ultimately undermine our shared human experience."

Originally showcased at the Miami Dade Library Hispanic Branch from September to December 2017, the installation has evolved to become a powerful statement on migration, diversity, and human connectivity. This project aims to counter negative immigrant stereotypes by showcasing real stories of community contribution and resilience.

The exhibition will be part of Noche de Arte 2025, an annual residency program known for supporting innovative and socially-engaged artistic work. By presenting "The Invisible Borders-Lines," the program continues its commitment to promoting art that challenges existing narratives and encourages deeper understanding.

Visitors to Noche de Arte 2025 can experience this transformative installation at the InterContinental Hotel Miami art gallery throughout September 2025.
