-- As more students have discovered the high quality of coaching and flexible options available through John Hughes Golf, headquartered in the heart of golf country near Orlando, Florida, the organization has added more expert teachers in order to meet demand. The most recent addition to the John Hughes Golf coaching team is Gibby Gilbert III, a golfer and instructor with more than four decades of success in the sport.

Gibby comes to John Hughes Golf with an impressive resume spanning competition from college to the PGA Tour Champions. Golf enthusiasts will recognize the name of his father, Gibby Gilbert II, as a PGA Tour and PGA Tour Champions winner, and Gibby Gilbert III certainly inherited his father's passion and skill for the game. After four years of college level competition at the University of Tennessee, Gibby went on to compete from 1997 to 2024, gaining an incredible amount of experience that he is now excited to share with his students at John Hughes Golf.

The particular advantages that Gibby offers to his coaching students here in Orlando include a wealth of inside knowledge about the professional competitive landscape, accumulated from spending decades in various organizations and experiencing the pressures of playing against the best in the game. For those interested in breaking into the professional circuit, Gibby is a valuable source of information to accelerate the learning process.

Gibby also brings an unusual attention to detail to his instructional sessions. His extensive background in the sport allows him to spot even the smallest inconsistencies or ingrained habits that may be hampering a golf student's ability to take strokes off their game. This detail-oriented approach is particularly valuable for golfers who have reached a plateau and can't seem to pinpoint what is holding them back from making additional progress.

John Hughes, the president and CEO of John Hughes Golf, is excited to welcome Gibby to the team, and he will quickly become an integral part of the organization's operations. Gibby will be involved in all clinical and coaching experiences, and will also be taking on private clients for one-on-one golf schools. John will also be putting Gibby's organizational skills to good use as they work together to build the academy and expand the opportunities available to golf students.

Golfers who are interested in the versatile coaching options offered at John Hughes Golf can explore the revamped website at www.johnhughesgolf.com. From half-day golf schools focused on a single aspect of the game to multiple-day schools for a small group, students will love learning in the beautiful setting of some of Orlando's best courses under the instruction of John Hughes, Gibby Gilbert III, and the organization's other expert teachers. Virtual coaching is also available, utilizing today's most powerful digital tools to deliver effective instruction online. Golfers are invited to browse the website to learn more about in-person instruction, virtual sessions, and a wealth of free resources for golf enthusiasts.
