- In May 2024, Remix Therapeutics announced the enrollment and dosing of the first patients in two Phase 1 clinical trials assessing REM-422, a MYB mRNA degrader, for recurrent or metastatic ACC and acute myeloid leukemia/high-risk myelodysplastic syndromes (AML/MDS).

Adenoid Cystic Carcinoma Overview

Adenoid Cystic Carcinoma (ACC) is a rare and slow-growing malignancy that primarily affects the salivary glands but can also arise in other areas such as the breast, lungs, and lacrimal glands. Despite its indolent nature, ACC is highly invasive and tends to spread along nerves (perineural invasion), leading to a high risk of recurrence and distant metastases, particularly to the lungs. Standard treatment includes surgical resection followed by radiation therapy, as chemotherapy has shown limited efficacy. Due to its unpredictable clinical course and resistance to conventional treatments, there remains a significant need for novel therapeutic approaches.
