An increase in working parents is expected to fuel the growth of the babysitting services market moving forward. Working parents, individuals who are employed while juggling parenting responsibilities, are on the rise, with services like babysitting becoming crucial for balancing professional responsibilities with family needs. Data from the Bureau of Labor Statistics in April 2024 highlighted that in 2023, 91.9% of households with children had at least one parent employed, an increase from 91.2% in 2022. Moreover, among married-couple families with children, 97.6% had at least one employed parent, and 67% had both parents actively participating in the workforce. Hence, the growing number of working parents will potentially drive the growth of the babysitting services market.
