When smoke is heavy outside for a long period, fine particles and gases can build up indoors even though they may not be visible. These toxins stay in the air for a long period and last for months or years. Running an air purifier is an effective way to remove airborne particles and gases. Improved indoor air quality can impact overall health, cognitive function, infectious disease transmission rate, and comfort. In support of these recovery efforts, Medify Air has donated over 2,500 air purifiers to the Los Angeles Dream Center, more than 100 air purifiers to volunteer organizations and local shelters across LA, and 250 filter replacements to AltaMed.

"Medify Air is happy to do their part in the community and support the local businesses and people. We hope that these donations help many people with their recovery" (Jack Austin, Executive Vice President).
