innovation and creativity, CosMODA: Cosplay Runway, co-produced by Catherine Schuller and Daniel Hort, made waves during New York Fashion Week with an extraordinary fusion of comics, couture, and storytelling. On Saturday, February 8, at 30 Wall Street, CosMODA in collaboration with Dr. Jessica Konopka unveiled, Batman and Nighthawk: A Crossover Cosmic Odyssey," a groundbreaking new comic concept that brings together legendary characters from Mark Gruenwald's best-selling novel Squadron Supreme which is the equivalent of Justice League of America. The character of Nighthawk is the counterpart of Batman from Marvel Universe. In this modern spin on the legendary comic narrative, a new character, the female version of Nighthawk emerges on the scene to shift paradigms in an ultimate and unprecedented rendition of haute couture cosplay. This revolutionary project explores themes of hope, transformation, and the triumph of vision over violence, set against the stark contrasts between two worlds—one steeped in darkness and the other illuminated by light.

The debut of this original cosplay couture crossover concept was accompanied by a stunning fashion showcase, featuring a NightHawk X Dark Knight couture gown designed by New York-based designer Re'Malhi Haute Couture. The ensemble was commissioned and modeled by Dr. Jessica Konopka, entrepreneur, and talented brand ambassador, redefining superhero-inspired fashion, capturing the spirit of the collaboration between comics and couture.

Catherine Schuller-Gruenwald, a trailblazer in the cosplay and fashion industries and the widow of Marvel editor and writer Mark Gruenwald, and author of Captain America and Squadron Supreme, served as the producer of this groundbreaking collaboration. Mark Gruenwald's legacy is honored and continued by the creative vision of his inspiration and legacy advocate Catherine Schuller-Greunwald merging Haute Couture fashion with his legendary masterpiece and best selling graphic novel, Squadron Supreme, featuring Nighthawk.

The Story behind the Gown Creation

Batman and Nighthawk: A Cosmic Crossover Odyssey" is a compelling comic narrative, authored by Catherine Schuller for this feature showcase that bridges two world. In Gotham City, Batman wrestles with a profound emptiness amidst crime and chaos. His journey takes a transformative turn when he envisions Planet 31916, a utopian world of harmony and resilience. There, he encounters the female version of Nighthawk, also known as Empress Seraphina, who embodies the principles of reinvention, resilience, and regeneration. Together, their story serves as a beacon of hope and a symbolic meeting of darkness and light.

This new concept captivated the runway audience at New York Fashion Week. The showcase blended dynamic storytelling with a unique feature fashion presentation of an haute couture masterpiece representing Mark Greunwald's original creation of superheroes' crossover, with Contest of the Champions. CosMODA's presentation not only showcased the synergy between comics and couture but also highlighted the transformative power of art and fashion to inspire new possibilities. The innovative concept of Haute Couture Cosplay, showcased by this collaboration creates a groundbreaking trend in the Fashion industry celebrating the iconic legacy of the greatest love story ever told, when comics married Fashion.
