Our mission at NJCS is to give everyone an affordable seamless way to create content, build thought leadership, and tell their story”

John Bertino

The event will feature a public ribbon-cutting ceremony and private tours. Attendees can experience guided tours, live demonstrations, and networking with local officials, influencers, and industry professionals.

“Our mission at NJCS is to give everyone an affordable seamless way to create content, build thought leadership, and tell their story,” said John Bertino, co-founder and advertising executive. Co-founder Steven Picanza added, “This studio represents the future of content creation, blending professional-grade facilities with a community-driven approach to support creators and businesses alike.”

The addition of NJCS to downtown Haddonfield signifies a shift in the landscape of modern-day "Main Street USA." The presence of a podcast and content studio reflects the changing ways that people consume media and how businesses adapt to build their brands. This evolution demonstrates how Main Street is transforming to meet the demands of today's consumers and stay relevant in an ever-changing marketplace.

Podcasting and long-form content are vital in today's world of abundant information. NJCS enables everyone - from creators and small businesses to nonprofits and Main Street businesses - to produce engaging, reliable content through high-quality podcasts and videos, fostering meaningful conversations with their audience. NJCS stands out for its affordability and ownership by 2 award-winning advertising professionals who understand creators' and businesses' unique needs. The studio disrupts traditional barriers, offering professional-grade services accessible to all at reasonable pricing.
