"Accountants play a crucial role in supporting small businesses, but bookkeeping can consume valuable time that could be better spent on financial strategy," said Ajay Mehta, a CEO of IBN Technologies. "By choosing to outsource bookkeeping, accountants gain access to expert financial support, and real-time reporting, helping them focus on delivering high-value insights to their clients."

Handling bookkeeping in-house requires dedicated resources, expertise, and constant attention to detail—challenges that many accountants and small firms struggle to balance. The workload of recording transactions, managing payroll, reconciling accounts, and ensuring tax compliance often limits their ability to scale their business. For many, hiring full-time bookkeepers isn't a costeffective option, making outsourcing a practical solution to maintain accuracy and efficiency.
