First and foremost, it is essential to choose a termite company that is BBB accredited. This means that the company has met the BBB's standards for ethical business practices, customer service, and transparency. The BBB also provides a platform for customers to leave reviews and file complaints, giving you a better understanding of the company's reputation. By choosing a BBB accredited termite company, you can have peace of mind knowing that you are working with a trustworthy and reputable company.

In addition to BBB accreditation, it is important to consider the company's years in business. A termite company that has been in business for at least 25 years has proven their expertise and longevity in the industry. This also means that they have likely encountered a wide range of termite infestations and have the experience to handle any situation. Choosing a company with a long-standing history in the business can give you confidence in their ability to effectively eliminate termites from your home.

Lastly, take into account the company's Google rating. A 4.5 or greater rating is a good indication of the company's quality of service and customer satisfaction. This rating is based on real customer reviews and can give you valuable insights into the company's performance. A high Google rating is a strong indicator that the company is reliable, efficient, and provides exceptional service.
