This program is in tandem with the nonprofit's "All Hands Mission" that provides support to those impacted by catastrophic disasters across the United States and overseas. In October, Caring For Others hosted an "All Hands Mission" distribution providing more than $750,000 in merchandise to Augusta residents with assistance from The Convoy of Care, a partnership activated during disasters with NOBLE (National Organization of Black Law Enforcement Executives), Georgia Bureau of Investigation, Georgia State Patrol and other state law enforcement agencies along with WSB-TV (ABC affiliate) and the Georgia Motor Trucking Association.

However, there have been an increasing number of families struggling with bouncing back from the hurricanes, the CA fires, the floods and other recent natural disasters; and Caring for Others sees there is clearly a need for ongoing support for those impacted, ultimately propelling the launching of the dedicated Rehoming Center. In fact, two Augusta families will be the first to receive support from the new rehoming center on Friday, February 21.

“Our goal is to provide families with a kick-start to a new home with our Rehoming Center,” said Caring For Others Founder and CEO Eslene Richmond-Shockley. “We aim to provide the communities impacted by the recent natural disasters with the proper goods they need to start their journey of feeling at home again.”

The “All Hands Mission” is a coalition of local companies that aim to provide immediate aid, relief and comfort to areas severely impacted by catastrophic natural disasters across the United States and overseas. Caring For Others Founder and CEO Eslene Richmond-Shockley has been providing relief funds and supplies to those impacted by dozens of natural disasters over the last two decades.
