

LegalMatch Study Reveals Trends in Immigration and Deportation Cases Over Recent Administrations

RENO, NV, UNITED STATES, February 24, 2025 /EINPresswire.com/ -- In a recent study conducted by LegalMatch.com, a detailed examination of immigration and deportation trends was performed using case-load data submitted to the platform. The data presents significant insights into how immigration cases and deportation actions have shifted under the past two U.S. presidential administrations.

These trends reveal the significant impact of presidential policies on immigration and deportation cases.”

During President Trump's first term, there was a consistent decline in the number of immigration cases. A stark contrast was observed when President Biden took office, and immigration cases went up. A critical focus of the study highlights the substantial increase in deportation cases, which surged by 26% during Trump's 2017 inaugural year. This increase continued into 2019, reflecting that administration's stance on immigration. Conversely, Biden's first year saw deportation figures reach the lowest levels recorded since the beginning of Trump's presidency, signaling a marked change in policy approach.
