This move is about creating stronger connections with our community, being more accessible to the families we serve, and partnering with local businesses to better support our seniors.”

Jeanette Palmer, Owner

“Being part of the vibrant downtown Arlington Heights business community has always been a dream of mine,” said Jeanette Palmer, owner of Right at Home Northwest Suburban. “When the opportunity arose to establish our office on Dunton Avenue, alongside so many wonderful local businesses, we knew this was our chance to become an even more integral part of the community we serve.”

The new downtown location positions Right at Home Northwest Suburban at the center of Arlington Heights' downtown area, making it more accessible to families seeking in-home care solutions for their loved ones. “This move is about more than just a new address,” Palmer explained. “It's about creating stronger connections with our community, being more accessible to the families we serve, and partnering with local businesses and organizations to better support our seniors.”

Palmer has built Right at Home Northwest Suburban's reputation on understanding that aging in place is about maintaining not just independence, but also community connections. “We know that 90% of seniors want to age in their homes, surrounded by the community they love,” said

Palmer. "Our downtown presence allows us to be more responsive to their needs while also participating more actively in the vibrant Arlington Heights community."

The new office offers the full range of Right at Home Northwest Suburban's services, including light housekeeping, medication reminders, transportation, personal hygiene assistance, and specialized care for adults with chronic health conditions. The care team provides personalized support through free in-home assessments, ensuring each client receives care that matches their specific needs and preferences.

"Arlington Heights has such a strong sense of community, and our new location allows us to be right in the middle of it all," Palmer added.
