

Belal Hamideh Weighs In As More Than 2,800 Die in 2024 California Car Accidents

2,800 Died in 2024 California Car Accidents and the Number is Expected to Be Revised Up

LONG BEACH, CA, UNITED STATES, February 24, 2025 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Belal Hamideh, a car accident lawyer in Long Beach, recently commented on the 2024 California car accidents numbers that have been released. According to the most recent estimates, more than 2,800 died in 2024 California car accidents. That number is expected to rise.

The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, NHTSA, recently released its "Early Estimate of Motor Vehicle Traffic Fatalities for the First 9 Months (January-September of 2024.)"

By those estimates, 2,824 people died in California car accidents from January through September of last year. Currently, the NHTSA is compiling the statistics for how many died in car accidents from October through December of 2024.

"These numbers are still entirely too high. By these numbers, on average, more than seven people die every day in a California car accident. Driving safely and defensively is paramount, yes. Even now, people drive under the influence. They drive without buckling up. It's never worth it to speed excessively, to take the rules of the road for granted. Always, I stand with victims of car accidents, helping them to receive the compensation they deserve for everything they've been through. I implore everyone who gets behind a wheel to make safety their first priority," said Belal Hamideh.

In his capacity as a Long Beach personal injury lawyer, Belal Hamideh has successfully represented those injured in car accidents for more than a decade. In addition to car accidents,
