"World's End and The Sea Angle" was displayed during the Frankfurt International Book Fair in Frankfurt, Germany, from October 16 to 20, 2024. Also known as the Frankfurter Buchmesse, the event is the largest book fair in the world.

This gripping narrative was highly praised by Kat Kennedy of the US Review of Books, acknowledging that, "Not only is this the story of David and Emily's love, but it is also a time travel fantasy in which David is transported to the distant past, and both are propelled into the future. The intense conversations between David and Emily are certainly an interesting technique to present the theories and ideas in the book. The many philosophical ideas brought to light are fascinating explorations of both ancient and modern thought. From genetics to ecology, there is no shortage of topics in these talks.”

Lily Amanda of the Hollywood Book Reviews also gave her praise to this narrative, highlighting that “The text greatly advocates for humanity, wisdom, love, and kindness as the key elements to human co-existence as illustrated from the beginning to the end of this read. In a world which is revolving around nuclear power, war threats, insecurity, and uncertainty, Shi manages to paint a picture of the effects of a nuclear war bringing the readers to the conclusion that rationality must be exercised to preserve human civilization evoking a desire that the simulated ‘world-end’ in this book is certainly not something anyone would want.”

David and Emily infected the whole world with their own inner happiness. Their deep love for each other had kindled their love for the entire world and all the people.”
