Which Factors Are Expected To Further Drive The Growth Of The Gastric Cancer Market?

One primary driver of the gastric cancer market is the global rising obesity rates. Obesity, characterized by excessive body fat accumulation, can lead to various health problems. This medical condition is typically determined by a body mass index BMI of 30 or higher. Poor diet, lack of physical activity, sedentary lifestyles, environmental influences, and genetic predispositions contribute to the soaring obesity rates.

Excess body fat, especially visceral fat around the abdomen, puts individuals at a higher risk of developing gastric cancer. Obesity triggers chronic inflammation and metabolic disturbances, both linked to cancer development, and is contributing to a mounting demand for gastric cancer treatment. Indicated by a World Health Organization report, individuals living with obesity globally reached staggering numbers in 2022, peaking with about 1 in 8 people living with the condition. Consequently, these rising obesity rates continue to stimulate the growth of the gastric cancer market.
