What's Driving The Knee Brace Market Growth?

A key driver of growth for the knee braces market is the increasing incidence of sports injuries. These injuries, resulting from participation in various athletic activities, impact different parts of the body, including muscles, bones, tendons, ligaments, and joints. The growing popularity of sports and fitness activities, leading to more individuals engaging in high-intensity training, is driving this rising incidence of sports injuries.

Knee braces, through their support, stability, and protection of the knee joint, help in reducing injury risks such as ligament tears or strains. They limit excessive movement and provide compression. For instance, in September 2024, the National Safety Council, a US-based public health and safety organization, reported a 2% increase in sports and recreational injuries in the US in 2023, with a total of 3.7 million individuals receiving medical treatment in emergency departments for such injuries.

What's The Take On Future Predictions And Emerging Trends?

Knee braces market size is expected to see a significant growth, reaching $2.32 billion in 2029 at a compound annual growth rate CAGR of 5.5%. This is due to an increasing aging population, rising awareness, growing sports participation and fitness trends, a higher prevalence of osteoarthritis, and a marked surge in non-invasive treatment options.

Several factors will contribute to the expected growth. These span across technological advancements, evolving demographics with aging populations globally, product innovation, strategic collaborations, and advances in knee braces.

Companies operating in the knee brace market are focusing on technological advancements, such as unloader braces. These braces are designed to enhance comfort, improve offloading mechanisms, provide more effective, personalized treatment for knee osteoarthritis. They reduce pain and improve function by redistributing pressure away from the affected compartment of the knee.

An exemplary innovation comes from Enovis Corporation's launch of the DonJoy ROAM OA Knee Brace in January 2024. This device provides dynamic unloading of the knee to alleviate pain and enhance mobility for individuals with unicompartmental osteoarthritis. Its user-friendly design, customizable fit, and lightweight construction make it an effective solution for conservative management and support during daily activities.
