-- Nancy Gunter, an expert in generational understanding and communication, was honored with the prestigious Golden Mic Award at the Big Idea Conference in Jacksonville, Florida, held on February 24-25.

Gunter captivated attendees with her dynamic presentation, "Generational Code: Understanding Generational Perspective to Improve Communication." Through a unique lens—exploring each generation's greatest invention—she engaged audiences in lively discussions, sparked laughter over common miscommunications, and provided a simple, actionable step to bridge generational divides in the workplace.

"Retaining your workforce is more critical than ever, but when tension exists between generations, the workplace suffers," said Gunter. "I help teams work better together in a fun, engaging, and informative way—where participants leave with better understanding and real strategies to improve communication and collaboration."

The Big Idea Conference featured an outstanding lineup of speakers covering diverse topics from leadership and personal growth to resilience and workplace culture. The Golden Mic Award recognizes speakers who deliver exceptional content, inspire transformation, and engage audiences at the highest level.
