"Building has never just been a lifelong interest—it has been a passion," says Forshag. "My foundation of construction knowledge started two generations before me when my grandfather,

John L. Crosby, started building in New Orleans in 1954. I can remember in high school thinking, 'Why can't I just go build with grandpa?' I grew up on construction sites and have always loved the process."

As the newly appointed President, Forshag aims to continue NHBA's mission of supporting legislative, economic, and educational initiatives that promote and protect the American dream of homeownership.

"I'm honored to serve the NHBA membership in this capacity," said Forshag.

"At Forshag Construction, we've always been committed to maintaining the highest standards in residential construction, and I look forward to bringing this same dedication to my role as president while advocating for fair and accurate laws that support our industry and homeowners alike."

At Forshag Construction, our goal is to exceed the customer's expectation providing a home that lasts for decades. I look forward to bringing this same commitment to excellence as NHBA President."
