Author and narrator Dean Christie asks, "Why aren't you getting a better return on your investments?" He answers that your focus is in the wrong place! As economies inevitably contract and stocks react, the best way to improve returns is to focus your investing on economies when they expand and avoid them when they contract.

In the foreword for Implications of the 30-Year Stock Cycle, New York Times Top Ten Bestselling Author Raymond Aaron writes, "It's not often that you come across something new in the world. However, Dean Christie's discovery of a 30-year stock cycle and its implications for you as a Canadian investor is just that."

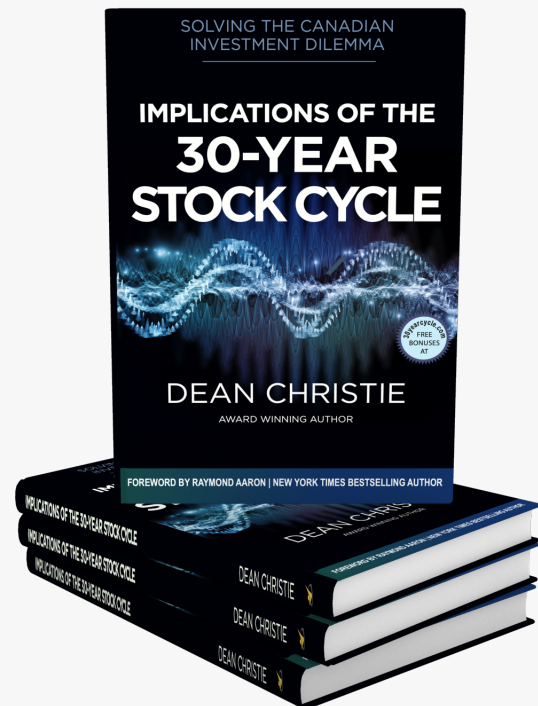

Join Dean as he explains his discovery and how you can leverage it to achieve better returns. Stop losing money! Learn how to ride the waves of expanding major economies using the non-concurrent cycles of expansion and contraction identified by the author. Create an upward bias in your investments.
