In an interview, Hickam said, "I have been thinking about my own imprint for years. Several authors, including astronauts, have come to me in the past to help them with their manuscripts and to get published. I so much enjoyed the process of working with them and helping to create new work, it was natural to want to be in a position to do both for all kinds of authors, famous or not. Authors are among my favorite people, and I am looking forward to discovering new ones and bringing their exciting stories to the reading public."
