The novel takes home the bronze award, an honor accompanied by a cash prize and special marketing promotions.

A Postcard from Jerusalem

Told through the eyes of Isaac, a young man seeking direction in life, A Postcard from Jerusalem follows a group of fifteen American teenagers on a six-month journey through Israel. Their adventure includes touring the country, living with Israeli families, and working on a kibbutz. Along the way, each teen grapples with personal growth, their Jewish heritage, and the complexities of life in Israel.

Richard Bist with Reader Views said of the story, "A Postcard from Jerusalem is a fantastic coming-of-age story. Almost every single character has an arc of some sort, and they are each touched by their visit to their homeland. The story is both entertaining and educational, and I recommend this book to anyone interested in learning about Israel and its people."

"I wanted to create a story that captures the transformative power of travel and cultural connection," Schulman reflects on the inspiration behind the novel. "It's an honor to receive this award, and I hope readers find both insight and inspiration in the characters' journeys."
