Why Is Amondys 45 Driving Market Growth?

Duchenne Muscular Dystrophy (DMD) is a progressive genetic disorder that primarily affects boys, leading to muscle degeneration due to a deficiency of the dystrophin protein. The increasing prevalence of DMD is a major factor driving the demand for Amondys 45, a therapy specifically designed for patients with exon 45 mutations. This rise in cases is closely associated with improved diagnostic capabilities, advancements in genetic testing, and enhanced methods for patient tracking and symptom recognition. According to a 2022 report by the National Institutes of Health (NIH), the global prevalence of muscular dystrophy is estimated at 3.6 per 100,000 people, with a notably higher prevalence in the Americas at 5.1 per 100,000 people.

Who Are the Leading Players in the Amondys 45 Market?

Sarepta Therapeutics Inc. is a key player, leading the development of targeted therapies for DMD.

What Trends Are Emerging in the Amondys 45 Market?

A major trend is the focus on specialized treatments for DMD patients with specific genetic mutations. Amondys 45 casimersen injection has received FDA approval for exon 45 skipping therapy, providing targeted support for muscle health by increasing dystrophin levels.
