Based on the type of packaging, the global contract packaging market is divided into primary, secondary, and tertiary.

The global contract packaging market is segmented according to packaging material into HDPE, LDPE, PET, paperboard, fiberboard, glass, and aluminum. HDPE is heavy-duty plastic for bottles, LDPE is flexible for bags, and PET is clear for beverage bottles. Paperboard is lightweight for cartons, fiberboard is for heavy-duty shipping, glass is for high-end items, and aluminum is light and protective.

By package types, the market is segmented into containers, blister packs, bottles and jars, vials, and others. Based on contract packaging services, the contract packaging market is bifurcated into Design, Inventory Management/Control, Printing and Component Production, Packaging Production, Package Assembly & Fulfillment, and Warehousing & Distribution.

The contract packaging market based on the end-user industry is divided into food, beverage, cosmetics, pharmaceutical, consumer electronics, and others. Food utilizes various packaging, beverages use cans and bottles, cosmetics use jars and tubes, medicine uses blister packs, electronics use protective packaging, and "others" include household products and industrial products.

Geography-wise, North America's contract packaging market is flourishing on account of several factors. A strong manufacturing and logistics foundation makes the region a hub for contract packagers. The growing consumer market, as well as e-commerce growth, drives demand for packaging services. Companies are outsourcing more non-core activities like packaging to enable them to play to their strengths. And then there is a growing need for customized packaging solutions, like custom design and labeling to meet stringent regulations, especially in sectors like pharmaceuticals and food & beverage.

As a part of the report, the major players operating in the global contract packaging market that have been covered are Valk Industries, Inc. and Aaron Thomas Company, Inc., Mattpak Inc. among others.
