Dr. Cherry's gripping psychological suspense series, Something's Going On Here: The Beginning of an End and Something's Going On Here: A Farewell to Harm, offers an interesting mix of mystery, self-discovery, and psychological depth. As LBF continues to be a hub for discovering groundbreaking literature, these books promise to capture the interest of readers and industry professionals alike.

In 'Something's Going On Here: The Beginning of an End,' retired English professor Nick Sanders relocates to the tranquil coastal town of Los Osos, only to uncover unsettling secrets lurking beneath its calm exterior. As he integrates into the community, unresolved personal conflicts resurface, forcing him to deal with a complex situation involving manipulation and deception. Dr. Cherry's expertise in psychology enriches the narrative, inviting readers to reflect on the complexities of mid-life transformation and the pursuit of truth.

The intrigue deepens in 'Something's Going On Here: A Farewell to Harm,' where Nick faces a new wave of threats, romance, and high-stakes crime. With drug cartels tightening their grip on Los Osos, he sets off on a dangerous journey to Mexico, partnering with an elite drug enforcement agency. As peril escalates, Nick must confront not only external dangers but also his inner struggles, making this psychological thriller a thought-provoking exploration of justice and redemption.

Explora Books is excited to showcase Dr. Cherry's work at LBF, where industry professionals return year after year to forge connections, discover new literary voices, and shape the future of publishing. With its compelling blend of suspense and psychological insight, the 'Something's Going On Here' series is poised to resonate with readers seeking both gripping storytelling and profound personal exploration.
