

Meagan O’Nan’s TEDx Talk, 'What to Do When You Disagree with Someone You Love,' Premieres on International Women’s Day

Acclaimed speaker’s powerful talk inspiring individuals to lead with vulnerability and foster real connection amidst an era of division.

SEATTLE, WA, UNITED STATES, March 7, 2025 /EINPresswire.com/ -- In a moment that could not

In a time when connection feels stalled, bold action and honest conversations are more critical than ever. When we embrace our full selves we empower others to do the same.”

Meagan O’Nan

be timelier, Meagan O’Nan’s highly anticipated TEDx Belltown Women talk will officially launch on March 8, 2025, International Women’s Day. Having already captivated audiences at a highly discussed Seattle TEDx event, her talk now debuts on the global platform. This launch coincides with IWD’s 2025 campaign theme, 'Accelerate Action', which calls for decisive steps toward achieving equality and how we can embody it.

Expanding the impact of her message, O’Nan is also launching a brand-new song, This Bridge We Build, written by Meagan O’Nan and featuring music and vocals by Seattle artist Kellie Rose. The song will be released on March 7th alongside her TEDx talk. This serves as a musical extension of her message, encouraging people to find common ground, embrace differences, and build connections even in times of disagreement. Availability will be coming up on Spotify and major channels.

O’Nan’s talk, How to Disagree With Someone You Love, delves into the transformative power of vulnerability and authentic leadership as catalysts for meaningful change. Drawing from her personal journey and professional expertise, she offers actionable insights to inspire individuals and organizations to actively participate in bridging divides.

Why This Talk and Song Matter Now

The launch of Meagan O’Nan’s TEDx talk on International Women’s Day 2025 is more than just symbolic—it’s a testament to the power of women’s voices, resilience, and leadership. Meagan TEDx talk and poignant musical addition arrive at a pivotal moment. Women’s voices, leadership, and rights are facing unprecedented challenges, making the need for authentic connection and inclusive leadership more urgent than ever. This talk is not just about navigating disagreements—it's about ensuring that human connections are made, women's perspectives are heard, and that we take meaningful steps toward a future where equality isn't just an aspiration, but a reality.
