Dr. Thomasina M. Portis

'Through the Eyes of This Black Woman: Continuing to Rise' delivers an interesting analysis of historical and contemporary racial disparities, drawing a striking parallel between the Apostle

This book is a worthwhile read in every local, state, and national legislative body and in every seminary.”

Dr. Ralph W. Canty

Paul's epistles addressing the struggles of the Gentiles and the ongoing challenges faced by Black Americans. Dr. Portis meticulously examines the systemic barriers erected by White supremacy ideology and their lasting impact on economic and social equity.

With an unflinching narrative, Dr. Portis presents an undeniable counterpoint to the revisionist tendencies that seek to obscure the realities of Black history. Her work underscores the resilience of Black Americans, emphasizing their triumphs over oppression and systemic racism. As Dr. Ralph W.

Canty, former South Carolina legislator and 9th President of The Progressive Baptist Convention, USA, states, "This book is a worthwhile read in every local, state, and national legislative body and in every seminary."

A particularly compelling aspect of Dr. Portis' work is its focus on economic disparities and the deliberate policies—such as gerrymandering, redlining, and voter suppression—that have hindered Black financial advancement. Dr. Lucy J. Reuben, Ph.D., Managing Director of SKEEA, highlights the book's critical insights, noting that it "summarily chronicles historical and current contexts of economic disparity while showcasing Black business success against systemic odds."
