DENVER, CO, UNITED STATES, March 11, 2025 /EINPresswire.com/ --

National TV personality Erica Cobb, who hosts and produces her NAACP Image Award nominated podcast

'Comeback: with Erica Cobb', through her production company Comeback TV Presents, is drawing from personal experience navigating infertility issues to shed light on key voices and provide vital information with a special four-episode podcast series releasing weekly in April. The series titled "Fertility Unfiltered" is in honor of National Infertility Awareness Week, which is April 20-26, 2025.

I know access to information is critical and the more we talk about our experiences, the more we can empower people,”

The first episode releases on Tuesday, April 8, and will feature a deeply intimate conversation between Erica and her husband, Anthony Baldwin, in which the couple details their emotional search for a gestational carrier. The second episode releases on Tuesday, April 15, and features CNN anchor Abby Phillip, a prominent advocate for maternal healthcare. The third episode releases on Tuesday, April 22, and features reality TV star Colton

Brown-Underwood and his husband Jordan Brown-Underwood, who share about welcoming their son Bishop via surrogate in 2024. The final episode releases on Tuesday, April 29, and features travel host Oneika Raymond who discusses a past miscarriage experience and living nomadically with a young daughter.

“I’ve always been transparent with anything I’m going through and fertility issues are no different. I was initially shocked to learn I had fertility issues, but now at age 44 having gone through several unsuccessful rounds of IVF, I just wish I had the information I have now a lot
