

Canadian Indigenous Investment Summit 2025

This year's Summit promises valuable discussions, connections, and insights into Indigenous investment and business growth.

LONDON, ENGLAND, UNITED KINGDOM, March 13, 2025

/EINPresswire.com/ -- The second annual Canadian Indigenous Investment Summit is taking place in the Square Mile on 10th April 2025. The Summit will bring together Indigenous leaders, investors, and industry experts to discuss partnerships and investment opportunities that align with Canada's economic and infrastructure goals.

Co-Chairs, Mark Magnacca and Robert Brant

Investment in Canada: The Growing Market

Canada remains a leading destination for investment, backed by a strong economy and vast natural resources. In 2023, foreign direct investment (FDI) in the country reached $62.3 billion, marking a 13.9% increase over the decade's average. With 660 new projects and 29,000 jobs expected, Canada continues to attract global investors. As one of the top producers of hydroelectric power, uranium, oil, and natural gas, the country offers strong opportunities in energy, mining, and sustainable development.

Addressing the $1 Trillion Infrastructure Gap

A McKinsey study estimates that Canada faces a $1 trillion infrastructure gap by 2030. The demand for modern transport, expanded housing, and clean energy projects presents major investment opportunities. With the right partnerships, investors can take part in large-scale projects with significant long-term returns.

Indigenous-Led Investments: A $575 Billion Opportunity

Indigenous partnerships play an important role in Canada's infrastructure and resource development. To date, $575 billion has been allocated across 470 Indigenous-led projects in sectors such as energy, transport, and community development. However, an additional $349 billion is still needed to bridge the Indigenous infrastructure gap, creating a key opportunity for investors.

Clean Energy and Critical Minerals

As demand for clean energy and critical minerals grows, Canada is well-positioned as a global leader. Investments in small modular reactors (SMRs) are helping meet emissions targets while maintaining energy security. The country's critical mineral resources, vital for technology and renewable energy, provide strong investment potential.
