“NRB applauds Chairman Carr for investigating claims of faith-based discrimination by YouTube TV and supports his efforts to ensure equal treatment for all voices.

“In this discriminatory video marketplace, religious programmers face an uphill battle, having been repeatedly denied carriage by over-the-top (OTT) streaming services like YouTube TV.

“Because the current regulations that govern carriage agreements for traditional cable and satellite TV providers don't apply neatly to OTT services, streaming providers have had free rein to refuse platforming of faith-based programming in what feels like a deliberate attempt to marginalize Christian voices.”
