Acromegaly Community Inc.: A Lifeline for Those Affected

Acromegaly is a rare condition caused by excessive growth hormone production, often due to a benign tumor on the pituitary gland. Symptoms range from enlarged hands and feet to joint pain and organ complications—challenges that can significantly affect a person's daily life. Yet, due to its rarity, many patients struggle to find the information and support they need.

Acromegaly Community Inc. is changing that. As a 501(c)(3) nonprofit, the organization provides education, advocacy, and peer support to individuals diagnosed with acromegaly and their families. Through its online support groups, patient resources, and outreach programs, Acromegaly Community Inc. ensures that no one has to face this condition alone. By fostering a strong community and offering vital educational tools, the nonprofit works to bridge the gap between patients, healthcare professionals, and researchers in the field.

This upcoming New Frontiers episode will offer an inside look at the organization’s mission, featuring personal accounts from those affected by acromegaly and insights from medical professionals striving to improve patient outcomes.
