- If you notice excessive dust on your furniture even after cleaning, your ducts might be clogged.
- If you see visible mold growth inside the ducts or around vents, it's time for a professional cleaning.
- If you have pets that shed, you may need cleaning more often.
- If you've had recent renovations or construction, dust and debris may have settled inside the ducts.

2. Watch for Warning Signs

- Unusual odors coming from vents could mean mold or mildew buildup.
- A sudden increase in allergies or respiratory issues in your household may indicate dirty ducts.
- Weak airflow from vents could suggest a blockage in your system.

3. Change Your Air Filters Regularly

- Check your filters every month and replace them at least every 90 days (or more often if you have pets or allergies).
- High-quality HEPA filters can help trap more dust, pollen, and pet dander.

4. Seal Leaks and Gaps in Your Ducts

- If your ducts have leaks, they can pull in dust, debris, and even pests from attics or crawl spaces.
- Sealing leaks can improve efficiency and keep your air cleaner.

5. Keep Your Home Clean

- Regular vacuuming, dusting, and cleaning pet bedding can help reduce dust and allergens in your home, keeping your ducts cleaner for longer.
