"Our mission is to spread positivity, hope, and inspiration beyond prison walls," says Gedalya. "Through these intimate home concerts, we aim to build meaningful connections with communities, sharing the transformative power of music and storytelling. It's about creating a space where people can come together, listen, reflect, and be inspired."

A New Song USA is seeking individuals interested in hosting these unique gatherings. Hosts simply need to invite friends, family, and community members to their homes for an evening filled with music, stories, and meaningful conversation. Gedalya emphasizes that these events can often be arranged at no cost, especially when he is already scheduled to be in the area. "It's not about money," Gedalya explains. "It's about connection and community. If people want to support our mission, they can contribute through a tip jar or donations, but the primary goal is to share these powerful experiences."

Those interested in hosting or attending a home concert or simply connecting with Gedalya and A New Song USA, are encouraged to visit the organization's dedicated webpage titled beyond-the-walls. The page includes articles about Gedalya's prison visits, inspiring stories, and a contact form where individuals can reach out, share their location, and express interest in hosting or attending an event.
