

Maternity Bridal Gowns, Destination Weddings & Zika Virus: Things Expecting Brides Should Consider

Brides-to-Be Can Now Say "I Do" in Style While Expecting | Traveling for a Destination Wedding and You're Pregnant? Protect Yourself from Zika Virus

TORONTO, ONTARIO, CANADA, March 21, 2025 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Brides-to-Be Can Now Say 'I Do' in Style While Expecting

Finding the perfect wedding gown is a significant moment for any bride, but for those who are expecting, finding a dress that is both elegant and accommodating can be challenging. Standard bridal gowns often require extensive and costly alterations to fit a growing baby bump, sometimes adding $500–$1,000 or more to the overall expense. Maternity bridal stores offer specially designed gowns that provide both comfort and style with minimal need for alterations, making them a practical choice for expecting brides.

Traveling for a Destination Wedding? Protect Yourself from the Zika Virus

For couples planning tropical destination weddings, expectant brides should take precautions against the Zika virus, a mosquito-borne illness that poses potential risks during pregnancy. Seven Women Maternity encourages brides travelling to warm climates to stay informed and take necessary protective measures:

- Check travel advisories before booking
- Use insect repellent and wear protective clothing in mosquito-prone areas

- Consider alternative destinations with minimal Zika risk

“At Seven Women Maternity, we care about more than just how our brides look—we care about their well-being,” says Stephanie. “We encourage all expecting brides to prioritize their health and safety, especially when planning a wedding abroad.”
