LA Fashion Closet Launches Its Own Brand with Purpose — TARPA TRIBES

For the first time, LA Fashion Closet will debut its exclusive brand with a cause — TARPA TRIBES, designed by Trupti Bhoir, founder of the SHELTER FOUNDATION. This groundbreaking collection is crafted by tribal women from remote villages in Palghar, Maharashtra, India. Using sustainable materials such as waste cloth, bamboo, and recycled paper, along with intricate Warli hand painting and block printing, these artisans have created one-of-a-kind masterpieces.

The TARPA TRIBES collection not only highlights their craftsmanship but also empowers these women by providing shelter, employment, and skill development opportunities. A portion of the proceeds from the collection will directly support these artisans, reinforcing LA Fashion Closet's commitment to fashion with purpose.

A Historic First: Fashion Meets Film — Presenting PARO

In a powerful collaboration with Trupti Bhoir Films, SHELTER FOUNDATION, and HOPEBLIT (A Voices Unheard Films), LA Fashion Closet will feature a private screening of PARO — a groundbreaking film addressing critical social issues such as gender infanticide, human trafficking, and the Paro Bride System.

PARO is more than a film — it's a movement. Produced by Oscar-listed producer and actress Trupti Bhoir (Trupti Bhoir Films) and Sandesh Sharda (Grow More Investments), the film sheds light on deeply ingrained cultural practices that threaten women's rights and safety. Extensive research by Bhoir has resulted in a gripping narrative that aims to ignite social change.

Also joining the movement is Ruhi aka Rohini Hak, Executive Producer of PARO and Founder of HOPEBLIT (A Voices Unheard Films), who has dedicated herself to advocating for women's empowerment through impactful storytelling and grassroots initiatives.

Why This Event Matters

This landmark collaboration bridges fashion, film, and activism to raise awareness about pressing global issues. By blending creativity with advocacy, the event aims to:

- Highlight the urgent realities of human trafficking and child marriage.
- Challenge harmful traditions while celebrating women's strength and resilience.
- Empower marginalized women by providing them with resources, shelter, and skills to build a better future.
