Northern California – Peter Jones is thrilled to announce the release of his debut novel, The Wind in the Forest Book 1: The Star of Light. This captivating tale takes readers on an adventure through a Paleolithic landscape where Neanderthals and humans must unite with the Ancient Races—Elves, Dwarves, and Elwen—to combat a malevolent sorcerer who poses a formidable threat to their existence.

Set against the backdrop of majestic mountain ranges and the vibrant forests of the Bittergrass Badlands, The Wind in the Forest Book 1: The Star of Light introduces readers to Uruk, a Neanderthal chieftain, and his twin nephews as they embark on a quest for self-discovery and courage amid the decline of their kin. As the Ancient Races face their impending extinction, the story weaves together themes of transformation and redemption.

"The inspiration for this book came from my own love for the outdoors and the beauty of nature," Peter shares. "I hope readers will connect with the characters and reflect on their own journeys through life's wilderness."

Jones' experience in large-scale construction management has honed his ability to craft vivid narratives filled with emotion and detail. His storytelling style brings an ancient world steeped in mystery to life, allowing readers to experience the struggle against an ancient darkness and the importance of unity among different races.
