

Spalding Golf Balls Return to Market After Years Off the Shelves

Remember Spalding Golf Balls? Spalding-branded golf balls are once again available to the public. An iconic brand is back on the tee box.

LOUDONVILLE, OH, UNITED STATES, March 25, 2025 /EINPresswire.com/ -- The Spalding name, long associated with innovation in sports equipment, is quietly reemerging in the golf world. Once a staple in bags across America, Spalding golf balls have returned to the market—reviving a legacy that spans over a century.

Spalding Golf's history dates back to 1876 when Albert Spalding founded the company and quickly established it as a leader in athletic gear. The brand introduced the first wound rubber golf ball and helped shape the future of golf ball construction. For much of the 20th century, Spalding was one of the most recognized names in recreational golf, with models like Top-Flite and Tour Edition becoming household staples.

When someone sees the Spalding name on a golf ball again, the reaction is always the same: Wait... Spalding golf balls?!”

Jo Rodgers, VP of Marketing

After disappearing from shelves in the early 2000s, many golfers assumed the Spalding name had left the sport for good. But under new licensing agreements and third-party manufacturing, Spalding-branded golf balls have quietly returned—now available through select retailers and generating buzz among nostalgic golfers and new players alike.

The newly released SD Tour model features a soft-feel, low-compression design that appeals to mid-handicap players looking for reliable distance with reduced spin. The Pure Spin model is designed for golfers who prefer an enhanced feel and control around the greens. Both models are brand new, conform to USGA standards, and have earned praise in independent testing. For example, a recent review by MyGolfSpy highlighted the SD Tour's surprising consistency and value compared to other balls in its range.

Adding to the renewed interest is a unique twist: baseball golf balls. These limited-edition balls feature a red-stitched design that mimics the look of a real baseball. These baseball golf balls offer full playability and a touch of novelty that's perfect for tournaments, gifts, or sparking conversation on the course.

"This is a brand that many golfers grew up with. Seeing it return with new models and a fun twist has definitely struck a chord with customers," said Jo Rodgers, VP of Marketing at ReNew Golf Balls.

Spalding's return hasn't been accompanied by large-scale advertising or tour sponsorships—but it's happening. For many, it's a quiet comeback that feels surprisingly welcome.
