In I IRS (My Hell of Life), Moten recounts his life journey from growing up in the racially segregated South to his experiences working in the IRS and serving in the U.S. Air Force and Marines. Through raw and unapologetic storytelling, he paints a vivid picture of the institutional and systemic racism he encountered throughout his career and personal life. Despite the harsh realities he faced, his faith in God never wavered, and his perseverance led him to find success in finance and business. His experiences as an IRS agent in a discriminatory workplace shaped his resilience and made him a formidable figure in tax enforcement.

With a powerful narrative that moves between past and present, Moten's memoir is both a personal testament and a call to awareness about racial inequality and its lasting impact. The book is a must-read for those who appreciate true-life stories that delve into themes of racial injustice, perseverance, and spiritual resilience.

Moten, who now runs Taxonyourside LLC, a tax consulting firm, hopes that his story will inspire readers to overcome their struggles, no matter the obstacles. His raw, unfiltered voice provides readers with a rare glimpse into the lived experiences of Black Americans who have fought against systemic oppression while maintaining unwavering faith.

As the LA Times Festival of Books celebrates its milestone 30th anniversary, Moten joins an inspiring lineup of authors sharing their thought-provoking works with thousands of book lovers. His presence at the festival serves as a powerful reminder of the need to confront uncomfortable truths, acknowledge history, and seek solutions for a more just society.
